Course Description:

This course is a graduate-level survey of human development across the lifespan. Human beings experience an enormous amount of transformations including physical, cognitive, affective/emotional, social, and personality changes. The ways in which developmental differences impact the work we do as professionals require careful consideration. Major theories and research that attempt to explain chronological constancy and change in human beings will be explored during the semester with an emphasis on practical applications and implications. This course is geared toward building the student’s foundational knowledge of human development for adaptation to the professional fields of education, counseling, and psychology. An important component of this course will be the exploration of universality and cultural variations in human development from conception to death. The importance of integrating culture into your professional conceptualizations cannot be overemphasized. The social/cultural context of development is very important to social justice issues we must consider as professionals, as is consistent with the School of Education’s Conceptual Framework—Professionalism in Service of Social Justice. Thus, factors which facilitate and impede healthy physical, cognitive, social, and affective/emotional development will be emphasized.

Objectives:

In general, the three overarching objectives for this course are:

1. Gaining factual knowledge (terminology, classifications, methods, trends)
2. Learning fundamental principles, generalizations, or theories
3. Learning to apply course material (to improve thinking, problem solving, and decisions)

Specific to the topic, the goals are for students:

1) to build the students’ foundational knowledge of lifespan developmental theories and research.
2) to critically examine the extent to which cultural variation is included and/or excluded from major theories of human development.
Note: Objectives 1 and 2 meet NSCP Standards 17A, 17B, 17C
3) to identify the implications of developmental theories and research for the counseling and educational professions (Standards 17F, 17K).
4) to identify and enhance the students’ knowledge of and expertise in one self-selected area of human development.
5) to understand the importance of sociocultural context in the conceptualization of development across the lifespan (Standards 17H).

Assignments:

1. Child or Adolescent Project (40%): In order to demonstrate your understanding of developmental theories as applied to children and adolescents, and how to use technology to identify pertinent research, you will be required to select a developmental transition area and present recommendations that would promote healthy development in this area (e.g., helping young children transition into attending school, facilitating learning to read, helping adolescents adjust to puberty, working with high school students entering the world of work). You will be working in groups of three (or four) determined by the instructor. The project will have 3 components: 1) Address what the literature has to say about the developmental transition you have selected (i.e., what are the issues, challenges). To become familiar with the field of developmental research, you should peruse journals such as Journal of Adolescent Research, Developmental Psychology, Journal of College Student Development, or Child Development. 2) Based on your reading of the literature, develop a list of best practices or recommendations for parents and/or practitioners working with this age group. 3) Present parts 1 & 2 to the class in a 30 minute presentation using Power Point. Since context is critical to development, you must describe the relevant sociocultural issues (e.g., gender, SES, racial differences) related to your issue. You will be required to provide your classmates with a list of references they can use to explore your topic further. Each person should turn in a written summary of his/her part of the presentation (including the background research and the recommendations you compiled). Approve your topic with the instructor via email by 9/22/15. This project is “due” (i.e., will be presented) during classes on November 3 & 10, 2015.

2. Young and Middle Adulthood Project (20%): You will be doing a self-analysis of developmental issues relevant to your current or a recent life stage (i.e., you may either do this retrospectively or contemporaneously). Select a topic that has meaning for you personally (e.g., establishing romantic relationships, career change/indecision, gender identity development, racial identity development, decision to become a parent, empty nest syndrome, caretaking of elderly parents, retirement decisions) and discuss whether your transition in this area was challenged or facilitated by your social context. You may find it useful to do some background reading on the topic you select but the "data" should be your own experience. Page limit is 5 pages. Due October 27, 2015.

3. Older Adult Narrative Inquiry Project (30%): In order to demonstrate your understanding of later-life development, you will be required to interview someone in older adulthood about issues affecting development at this stage (e.g., physical health, issues of loss, life lessons learned, views of death and beyond). Providing a description of the sociocultural context of your interviewee will be important to your analysis of the interview content. You will be expected to summarize to what extent your subject's experience fits with theoretical concepts you read about in your text. You will turn in a summary of the interview and a developmental analysis of the issues raised. Length: 8 pages max. Due December 1, 2015.

4. Participation (10%): This class will involve small and large group discussion and thus, it is expected that all students will attend classes and participate in these dialogues.

Academic Honesty
Academic honesty is an expression of interpersonal justice, responsibility and care, applicable to Loyola University faculty, students, and staff, which demands that the pursuit of knowledge in the university community be carried out with sincerity and integrity.

Accessibility
Students who have disabilities which they believe entitle them to accommodations under the Americans with Disabilities Act should register with the Services for Students with Disabilities (SSWD) office. To request accommodations, students must schedule an appointment with an SSWD coordinator. Students should contact SSWD at least four weeks before their first semester or term at Loyola. Returning students should schedule an appointment within the first two weeks of the semester or term.

Ethics Violations
It is unacceptable and a violation of university policy to harass, discriminate against or abuse any person because of his or her race, color, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, disability, religion, age or any other characteristic protected by applicable law. Such behavior threatens to destroy the environment of tolerance and mutual respect that must prevail for this university to fulfill its educational and health care mission. For this reason, every incident of harassment, discrimination or abuse undermines the aspirations and attacks the ideals of our community. The university qualifies these incidents as incidents of bias.

In order to uphold our mission of being Chicago's Jesuit Catholic University--a diverse community seeking God in all things and working to expand knowledge in the service of humanity through learning, justice and faith, any incident(s) of bias must be reported and appropriately addressed. Therefore, the Bias Response (BR) Team was created to assist members of the Loyola University Chicago community in bringing incidents of bias to the attention of the university. If you believe you are subject to such bias, you should notify the Bias Response Team at this link: http://webapps.luc.edu/biasreporting/

Professionalism in the Service of Social Justice: As a professional counselor, higher education professional, school psychologist or counseling psychologist you can be a vehicle for justice in whatever setting you work. Issues of oppression, privilege, access, opportunity, inclusion, exclusion, discrimination and bias occur throughout our society. You will be in a unique position to apply the knowledge base of your profession and the skills that you will acquire in an ethical and reflective manner that promotes the self-development and self-determination of others. This class is designed to help you consider social justice as a critical aspect of your professional work.

Diversity: Your program is committed to issues of diversity including, but not limited to, race, gender, sexual orientation, social class, ethnicity, ability status. This class is designed to facilitate your development as a culturally competent professional, able to work effectively with diverse clients and communities.

Electronic Communication Policies and Guidelines: The School of Education faculty, students and staff respect each other’s rights, privacy and access to electronic resources, services, and communications while in the pursuit of academic and professional growth, networking and research. All members of the university community are expected to demonstrate the highest standards of integrity, communication, and responsibility while accessing and utilizing technology, information resources, and computing facilities.

Dispositions: The dispositions of Professionalism and Fairness will be assessed in this class. Professionalism is assessed by examining your conduct as a student both in your interactions with the instructor as well as other students. Students who show impairment in this regard may be assessed as deficient. Students who exhibit exemplary conduct will be assessed as such on this dimension. Fairness is an indication of how you perceive your future clients in terms of social justice issues. Students who show impairment in this regard may be assessed as deficient. Students who exhibit exemplary conduct will be assessed as such on this dimension.
