Office Hours: By appointment Tuesdays & Thursdays 10:30-11:15am

Course Description:
This course gives a general historical and theoretical overview of communication. We will discuss important periods in communication history: the oral, written, electronic and digital eras and look at communication through a critical, historical, and theoretical lens so that students will acquire an intellectual framework for further study and practice in communication. This course will increase basic communication literacy and the power of media in the world or communication.

Course Objective:
- Understanding the basic factors affecting mass communication and mass media
- Development of analytical and critical thinking skills concerning mass media and its messages
- To become a critical consumer and engaged participant of mass media
- Understanding society’s impact on the media & the media’s impact on individuals & society

Lectures will be based on the following textbook: “Mass Communication: Living in a Media World” By: Ralph E. Hanson - Please make sure you read the chapter before class.

Attendance: Show up, on time, be professional and participate. Turn off cell phones and other electronic devices. Laptops are welcome if taking notes. If you’re not taking notes, I will ask that your laptop be put away. If you act unprofessional or inappropriate, you’ll be asked to leave the class and I will report the incident to the Dean and discuss appropriate action. Unexcused absences will affect your final grade. If you have more than three absences during the semester, your grade will be reduced by a full letter, unless medical documentation proves the necessity of the absence.
Grading: Grades will be based upon attendance, professionalism, participation, written assignments and discussion, understanding of material in Mid Term and Final assessments.

Academic Integrity
Standards and Regulations Home
The basic commitment of a university is to search for and to communicate the truth as it is honestly perceived. The university could not accomplish its purpose in the absence of this demanding standard. To the extent that this standard is respected, a genuine learning community can exist. Students of this university are called upon to know, to respect, and to practice this standard of personal honesty.

Plagiarism is a serious form of violation of this standard. Plagiarism is the appropriation for gain of ideas, language, or work of another without sufficient public acknowledgement and appropriate citation that the material is not one's own. It is true that every thought probably has been influenced to some degree by the thoughts and actions of others. Such influences can be thought of as affecting the ways we see things and express all thoughts. Plagiarism, however, involves the deliberate taking and use of specific words and ideas of others without proper acknowledgement of the sources.

The faculty and administration of Loyola University Chicago wish to make it clear that the following acts are regarded as serious violations of personal honesty and the academic ideal that binds the university into a learning community:

Submitting as one's own:

1. Material copied from a published source: print, internet, CD-ROM, audio, video, etc.
2. Another person's unpublished work or examination material.
3. Allowing another or paying another to write or research a paper for one's own benefit.
4. Purchasing, acquiring, and using for course credit a pre-written paper.

The critical issue is to give proper recognition to other sources. To do so is both an act of personal, professional courtesy and of intellectual honesty.

Plagiarism on the part of a student in academic work or dishonest examination behavior will result minimally in the instructor assigning the grade of "F" for the assignment or examination. In addition, all instances of academic dishonesty must be reported to the chairperson of the department involved. The chairperson may constitute a hearing board to consider the imposition of sanctions in addition to those imposed by the instructor, including a recommendation of expulsion, depending upon the seriousness of the misconduct.

Academic cheating is another serious act that violates academic integrity. Obtaining, distributing, or communicating examination materials prior to the scheduled examination without the consent of the teacher; providing information to or obtaining information from another student during the examination; attempting to change answers after the examination has been submitted; and falsifying medical or other documents to petition for excused absences all are violations of the integrity and honesty standards of the examination process.

In the case of multiple instances of academic dishonesty across departments, the academic dean of the student's college may convene a hearing board. Students retain the right to appeal the decision of the hearing board to the academic dean of the college in which they are registered. The decision of the dean is final in all cases except expulsion. The sanction of expulsion for academic dishonesty may be imposed only by the Provost upon recommendation of the dean.
