Biographical/Administrative History

Susan A. Ross received her bachelor's degree in 1972 from Manhattanville College in New York and earned her master's degree in 1976 and her PhD in Christian Theology in 1982 from the University of Chicago Divinity School. Ross taught theology at St. Norbert College from 1980 until 1983 and at Duquesne University from 1983 until 1985. She also taught briefly at Indiana University of Pennsylvania (1984) and Boston College Institute of Religious Education and Pastoral Ministry (Summer 2001 and 2007). Ross obtained a position at Loyola University Chicago in 1985, where she taught for 34 years until her retirement in 2019.

Ross became a full professor at Loyola in the Theology Department in 2002. In addition to teaching classes in the graduate and undergraduate Theology programs, Ross also taught in the Women's Studies Program, the Institute of Pastoral Studies, and the Catholic Studies Program. She was Director of the Women's Studies Program 1992-1995 and served as the Director of the Ann Ida Gannon, BVM, Center for Women and Leadership 2006-2008. In 2008, she was appointed Chair of the Department of Theology, a position she held until 2016.

Ross authored three books as well as numerous articles, chapters, and book reviews. Her research interests included feminist theology, theological anthropology, women and the Eucharist, embodiment, systematic theology, and feminist ethics. She published Extravagant Affections: A Feminist Sacramental Theology in 1998, For the Beauty of the Earth: Women, Sacramentality, and Justice in 2006, and Anthropology: Seeking Light and Beauty in 2012. She co-edited Broken and Whole: Essays on Religion and the Body with Maureen A. Tilley in 1995.

Ross' expertise in feminist theology has been recognized throughout the theology profession, and she has been invited to present lectures and presentations at numerous institutions, conferences, and workshops. She received the College Theology Society Book of the Year Award in 1999, the Ann O'Hara Graff Award from the Women's Seminar of the Catholic Theological Society of America in 2001, and an Honorable Mention for Best Gender Issues Book from the Catholic Press Association in 2007. She served as President of the Catholic Theological Society of America and was Vice-President and an active member of the Board of Editors of Concilium, the international theological journal. Other memberships and activities included the American Academy of Religion, Society of Christian Ethics, Planned Parenthood/Chicago Area Consultation on Faith and Sexuality (1995), and Archdiocese of Chicago Ad-Hoc Organizing Committee for the Commission on Women (1991-1992). She was the Spring 2017 Faculty Fellow at the Ann Ida Gannon, BVM Center for Women and Leadership. In 2024, Ross received Loyola University Chicago's Living Traditions Award which recognizes an emeritus faculty member who exemplifies the integration of Catholic thought into their work.
