Lead the future of health care

As technology—and the needs of patients—evolves, the health care field will need dynamic professionals with a wide range of skills and experiences. At Loyola's new Parkinson School of Health Sciences and Public Health, you will build the foundation for a career in Exercise Science, Health Care Administration, or Public Health. Our programs prepare you to make a positive impact in the lives of others by improving patient and population health, health care accessibility, and health equity.

EXPERIENCES

Professional development

Loyola's extensive relationships with Chicago-area health care providers and public health organizations will offer you a variety of opportunities to gain vital hands-on practicum experience.

As a Parkinson student, you can expect meaningful opportunities for experiential learning.

JOB GROWTH

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, health care occupations are projected to grow 18 percent 2016–2026, faster than the average for all occupations.

MISSION

Make a difference

The new Parkinson School of Health Sciences and Public Health is the latest example of how Loyola continues to go to the frontiers of education, research, and practice to engage and assist people and communities who are underserved.
